

You don't want to end up here, do you?

Companies offering professional advice and consultancy services - whether in contract R&D, product development, trials management, data management or laboratory management services - have a common law duty to exercise reasonable skill and care at all times.

Allegations of professional negligence, breach of contract, misrepresentation, error or omission can land you in court. Even if you mount a successful legal defence, the costs can be enormous – and losing can mean a substantial payout.

- But we already exclude liability under our standard contract conditions, so we're protected - right?
- We've known our customers for years – they wouldn't sue us.
- The insurance is too expensive, isn't it?
- Our clients have never asked us to carry this insurance, so why should we bother?

For people who think along these lines, we've prepared a FREE briefing paper about Professional Indemnity Insurance. We believe you can't afford not to read it.
